

Barbara Kruger, Untitled (Money Can Buy You Love), 1985, which sold for $63,000 at Christie's New York in 1999.

Sat 8 May

6pm CCA

Free Event

What's Left in Feminism?

Ailsa McKay

Maud Bracke

Catherine Eschle

Marina Vishmidt

...respond to Nancy Fraser's
'Feminism, Capitalism and the Cunning of History'

Nancy Fraser situates the feminist movement within the larger political context of its historical moment. She explains how some feminist demands for equality have been largely accepted, but, considering the process of feminism's evolution in the changing social context of neoliberalism, this acceptance has come at the cost of decoupling feminism's emancipatory edge. Finally, she contemplates the possible reorientation of feminism in the present context of capitalist crises, which could start a shift to a new form of social organising...

<http://tinyurl.com/ybear9l>

Part of RIB (Radical Independent Bookfair)

8, 15, 22 May, mini stalls 11am-7pm www.ribproject.org

CCA, 350 Sauchiehall St, Glasgow G2 3J

